

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An optical element of the present invention includes a structure having at least one convex portion and at least one concave portion formed so as to be adjacent to either one of the convex portions. At least one surface of the structure is covered, and the optical element has a hollow portion. At 5 least one surface of the structure is covered with a covering layer formed by a deposition process.